ESTATE MARKET

ALMOST TOO HOT TO TRANSACT ANY BUSINESS.

The Abstract Men, However, Are Busy -Some of the Bigger Deals-The Week's Transfers,

Last week was rather a busy one in the real-estate market, notwithstanding the hot weather, and a large number of transfers were made. Real-estate men believe there would have been at least 30 per cent. more business had the weather been more endurable. It was too hot to accompany prospective purchasers over the city, and for this reason several large deals were

The abstract men had a busy week, as the heat did not affect their business to any great extent. Several of the largest deals consummated during the week were made yesterday. One was the sale of the ground and building known as 51 and 53 Virginia avenue by the Metzger agency to Frank H. Talbott, for $20,000. The former owner was George L. Maas. The building is occupied by Pearson, the druggist. It is a three-story brick structure, with 76 feet John H. Holliday et al. to Helena M. frontage on Virginia avenue and 82 feet on Maryland street. On July 5 the same property was sold to Mr. Maas by Phoebe Kealning for $18,000.

W. E. Stevenson yesterday sold to the Indianapolis School Board two lots with a | Harry F. Phipps to Stephen A. Clark, total of 80 feet and a depth of 152 feet, at Twenty-first and Illinois streets, just north of School No. 32. The consideration was \$4,500. This land will be used for future extension of the building and for playgrounds for the children. $\times \times \times$

William Cline, of the Cline agency, closed a deal yesterday involving Indianapolis and Putnam county property, the consideration being $10,000. John W. Thompson transferred to Ferry W. Turner four pieces of improved property on Northwestern avenue, and Mr. Turner conveyed to Mr. Thompson a 161-acre farm, situated near Cloverdale.

Two large pieces of property were sold to the Railroadmen's Building and Savings Association last week by Sarah E. One was Lot 20 in Bruce Place addition, on College avenue, near Twentysecond street, the lot being 65 by 215 feet, and the consideration $7,118.14. MODERN GEOGRAPHY PICTURES.

May Cost from $10,000 to $15,000 to Illustrate a High-Grade Text-Book. New York Sun. "If you ever write a geography," said the man at the corner desk, "you will find the selection of the pictures the most interesting part of the business. At least, I did. It was also the most painstaking part. "As a rule the author of a geography does not furnish his own illustrations. This is not due to a deficiency of artistic judgment, but to lack of facilities for securing proper material. Had I understood in the beginning what a herculean task this thing of obtaining suitable illustrations was going to be, I, too, should have left the job to the publishers. "To lliustrate a modern, high-grade geography costs anywhere from $10,000 to $15,000. In my book the pictures were all made from special photographs or draw-Photographs were most generally used, but I have a number of marine views and large prairie and harvesting scenes, such as no photograph could do justice to, that are the work of special artists. Besides these I have used copies of four paintings illustrating certain phases of European life, and they cost me a prefty "All these pictures are strictly up to date. Indeed, if there is any Doubting Thomas who maintains that the world does not found in the text-books of fifty years ago and he will be convinced. About the only pictures found in the books of both periods are views of a Southern cotton field and St. Paul's, London. No geography, no matter when or where issued, would be complete without these two illustrations. "While preparing my own manuscript I had occasion to examine many geographies used in foreign schools, especially in England, France and Germany. From an American point of view these text-books are woefully inferior to our own as regards clearness of text, illustrations and general makeup, but the Mississippl cotton field and St. Paul's were indispensable features. So, of course. I used the cotton field and St. Paul's. I am by no means a slave to convention, but I dared not challenge public opinion to the extent of omitting these favorite classics. "With these exceptions my work is strictly original, as is that of most makers of geographies in these days. Pictures in all new editions of geographies make a strong point of industrial improvements. Photo- | CO., 144 E. 'In one instance my artist went up on a reservation in Montana to take some Indian photographs. While there four redskins who had been convicted of horse stealing were lynched in a bunch, and my Murphy & Tinker's corrected addition, for artist, who was present at the execution, got a picture of them dangling from the branches and proudly exhibited it as a destrable portrayal of the manners and customs of the far West. This might not have been any worse than the old geographical illustrations called 'Indians Spearing Fish' and 'Indian Massacre,' still it didn't exactly suit my purpose and I heartlessly excluded

"Very few recent geographics contain the imaginary pictures which formerly graced schoolbooks and were vaguely labeled 'this is a mountain,' or cape, or whatever was up for description. The abstract has to landscapes exceeding care is used in the selection of pictures. In this one particular I think the French geographies are a little superior to any others."

A FACT IN NATURAL HISTORY.

Why Cows Have More Dangerous Horns than Bulls.

It may, perhaps, have struck some of my readers as odd (I remember puzzling over the matter during my boyhood) that the horns of the cow-an eminently peaceloving creature in ordinary circumstances -are usually much more dangerous than those of the bull, whose pugnacious disposition has become a proverb. Not only are the cow's horns both longer they are bent forwards and upwards in such a way that, in the act of charging or tossing an enemy, they would generally penetrate far enough to kill. The horns of the bull are not only shorter, stouter and more blunt than those of the cow, but, in many species, they stick straight out on Any place in Indiana. Agents wanted. THE STUDY OF ROOTS.

Method by Which the Scientist May Learn Secrets of Plant Life.

Pearson's Magazine. A. M. Ten Eyck, a member of the Dakota station, has devised a method for the careful scientific study of roots which is as nteresting as it is satisfactory. He dug a trench two feet wide about a block of earth nished by the Indiana Title Guaranty and Loan in which were growing some plants the the block stood out quite clearly alone he again. made a light wooden frame to fit around it and covered this with common wire poultry netting. This held the earth in $1.00 | place and allowed him to pierce it through with enough thin wire rods, fastened at both ends to the netting, to hold up the 125.00 roots nicely in case the earth were washed FOR RENT-Desirable location for saloon, near away. The other plant was nothing like an excellent sample of its kind because it had these other two to contend with.
